SEVERAL CITIZENS. ALEXANDRIA AND THROUGH TRANSPORTA-TION.-The city of Alexandria is fighting over the fight which cities have been so much in the habit of making against any through connections by railroads within their corporate limits. We believe that this city has not made a fight on this subject, but would at any time have yielded to such communications had the railroad companies sought them. But whatever cities may have struggled against the public accommodation in this way, we believe there are few now of any importance where such connections are not complete. Alexanacross the Potomae. That distance is traversed by an independent railroad; and all the business and travel upon roads coming from the south and west, and touching Alexandria, it is contended, must be transferred to this little road, which has thus become the single conduit for them all. Now, with all due respect to Alexandria, everybody knows that nearly all the travel at least, taking those roads tending towards Alexandria, is destined for cities further the roads which convey this travel. It is, therefore, a hardship imposed upon these roads to compel them to stop within eight miles of their point of connection, and submit their passengers and freight to the petty corporation which boasts of little more than seven miles of railroad. The spirit that thus subordinates long lines of railway conducted administration, to this little monopoly, is exeeedingly narrow and contracted. That little concern should be a mere horse railway-and could hardly be considered more than a "onehorse" concern at that. It should be left to its local business, with which no large corporation would at all desire to interfere; and the longer lines, with their large through business, should be allowed to extend their roads to the line in order, which is the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and such other railroads as may here-

The seven-mile road can never build a bridge of proper strength and magnitude for the business that will likely be thrown upon ic. That must be the work of some great railroad corporation-possibly of two or more combined. The public interests demand there a bridge of very superior character, both in design and construction. Two or three large railroad corporations might erect such a bridge; but we cannot expect it from a corporation with its seven miles of track.

after terminate in Washington.

The mere statement of the fact that all the tusiness and travel destined to pass to or through Washington via Alexandria must be crowded upon this one short track at Alexandria makes the proposition so absurd that it would seem supererogatory to attempt to show its unpractical, illiberal, and unaccommodating the county of Fairfax, near Cloud's Mill, soid character. It is one of those obstructions to by said complainants to S. K. Brown, acting as commerce and the public convenience which, trustee for Catharine C. Brown, wife of John K. commerce and the public convenience which, though maintained for years, must finally give way to reason and justice. It cannot and will not be endured. The community that sustain it diced against them, and shakes the dust of their city from his feet as he departs from it.

Beach, P. Q. feb 7—law4w We hope that Alexandria, since she is the last city in the State that has not given free transit to railroads through her limits, will generously tollow the example of the others.

ADVANTAGES OF LATIN.—A very good member of the General Assembly of Rhode Island once moved to translate all the Latin phrases in the statute so that the "common people" could understand them.

The exquisite folly of such a measure was by no means obvious to the great body of the Assembly. It was quite as likely to pass as Assembly. It was quite as fixely of plant it would probably have carried it through. The late probably have carried it through. The late it was no I Hong is not a resident of this State, advantage to have the people understand the laws. They were not afraid of anything which they understood. It was these Latin words they were afraid of. "Mr. Speaker, there was a man in South Kingstown about twenty years ago, a perfect nuisance, and nobody knew how to get rid of him. One day he was hoeing core and he saw the sheriff coming with a paper, and he asked what it was. Now it he had told him it was a writ what would he have cared? but he told him it was a capias ad sat isfaciendum, and the man dropped his hoe and words in the statutes.
